

STUDY AND IMMIGRATE TO CANADA AFTER FOUR YEARS BACHELOR OF ENGINEERING FROM INDIA

If you're considering studying in Canada and pursuing immigration options after earning your four-year Bachelor of Engineering degree from India, here are some options to explore:

- 1. Consider taking a one or two-year diploma program at a private or semi-private college in Canada. This can give you one or three years of work permit, which can help you gain experience related to your education. You can then apply under the Provincial Nominee Program (PNP), Canadian Experience Class, or Express Entry for immigration to Canada.
- 2. You can also take a one-year Master's degree program at a selected university in Canada. After completing your degree, you can get a one-year work permit in Canada and find a job related to your education. With one year of experience, you can apply for Permanent Residency (PR) of Canada.
- 3. Another option is to take two years of full-time experience in India related to your engineering degree. After that, you can take a one-year Master's degree program at a selected university in Canada and get a job related to your education. Based on your experience in India, you can apply for PR of Canada as soon as you finish your Master's degree program.
- 4. You can also do a two-year Master's degree in India, get three years of experience related to your engineering degree in India, and if you have a high IELTS score, apply for direct PR of Canada under Express Entry.
- 5. If you're interested in business management, consider studying in a certain province of Canada for a two-year program related to it. This can give you three years of work permit, which can allow you to start your own business in Canada and apply for immigration.
- 6. Another option is to get a visitor visa of Canada, find a company in Canada that's related to offering you a job related to your education and experience in India, and ask the company to apply for LMIA (Labor Market Impact Assessment). Once approved, you can apply for a work permit of Canada from within Canada. After two years, you can apply for immigration under the Canada experience class, Express Entry, or PNP skilled worker immigration. If the job offer is on a permanent basis, you can apply for direct PR under Express Entry.
- 7. Finally, while waiting in India, you can find a company in Canada that's related to offering you a job related to your education and experience in India. Ask the company to apply for LMIA, and on approval of LMIA, apply for a work permit of Canada outside of Canada. After two years, you can apply for immigration under the Canada experience class, Express Entry, or PNP skilled worker immigration. If the job offer is on a permanent basis, you can apply for direct PR under Express Entry.

It's important to note that each option has its own processing time, cost, eligibility requirements, and required IELTS band. It's highly recommended that you seek legal consultation with an immigration lawyer like Prashant Ajmera of Ajmera Law Group to better understand your options and determine the best path for you. Mo: +91 99 74 25 3030 | Email: info@ajmeralaw.com | www.ajmeralaw.com

AJMERA LAW GROUP

Planning Your Study & Settlement Abroad